

Women Seen and Heard Virtual Film Festival

TIPS FOR A LIVELY DISCUSSION

About the Virtual Film Festival

The authors of the Women Seen and Heard books are hosting their very first Virtual Film Festival as a way for women to stay connected while sheltering in place. Every week in May, we will recommend provocative and timely films and provide you with a relevant Discussion Guide. All you have to do is find a few film-loving friends and schedule a weekly meeting (feel free to bring a glass of your favorite libation) and be prepared for a lively exchange of thoughts and ideas. Most of these films are available on Amazon or Netflix, although additional fees may apply.

Before Your Virtual Meeting

Encourage everyone to watch the film a few days before your meeting and download the free Discussion Guide. This will help get everyone's creative juices flowing. Use the questions as prompts to jump start the conversation. Structure the group in such a way that it keeps everyone engaged – either ask someone to be the facilitator or come up with a format that is sure to keep everyone engaged and allows the conversation to flow smoothly.

Tips for a Lively Film Fest Discussion

1. It's essential that everyone rent the film and watch it in advance of your meeting. The films should be available via Amazon.com or Netflix.
2. The Facilitator/Organizer establishes and emails the link for an online meeting.
3. Everyone should review the Discussion Guide produced for that week's film.
4. The Discussion Guide provided will keep things moving if someone facilitates the discussion. Without a single facilitator, the discussion guide acts as a structure to follow to keep things moving. Don't let anyone dominate!
5. Individuals might select a question that they like from the guide. After people weigh in with either general reactions, or specific aspects of the film they liked (or didn't), the discussion can be a "free for all." That's where you "follow the breadcrumbs!"
6. If you know one another's backgrounds well, the facilitator (or anyone) can ask a specific participant to address a particular question that is relevant to their experience in politics, business, professional life, government, etc.

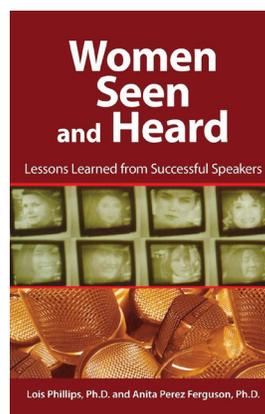

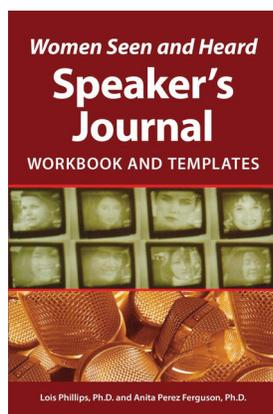

Please feel free to provide us with feedback and comments on how your group enjoyed the film on the Women Seen and Heard Facebook Page (and if you haven't already Liked our page, be sure to do so and invite others to do the same!)

Women Seen and Heard Speaker's Journal

WORKBOOK AND TEMPLATES

Lois Phillips, Ph.D. and Anita Perez Ferguson, Ph.D.

Click on the covers to purchase the Women
Seen and Heard books from Amazon.

Women Seen and Heard Virtual Film Festival

DISCUSSION GUIDE Molly's Game

Available on Netflix or for rent on Amazon

Discussion Questions

These questions are merely suggestions, so don't limit yourself to them. Given the unique makeup of your group, encourage new topics to emerge. Be sure to ask, "What else are we missing here?"

1. Did you enjoy the film? Why or why not?
2. This film was directed by Aaron Sorkin (of West Wing fame). What, if anything, did you notice about the direction?
3. Molly's world was one in which she became surrounded by men and soon financially dependent on their tips. She learned the process of organizing these underground games and soon built her own game through networks she plumbed with the help of play-girls who helped her build her multimillion-dollar business. Discuss how her early life prepared her to:
 - become the entrepreneur in a world of men
 - fend off their advances
 - accumulate wealth
4. What was the public perception of the Poker Princess? What was really going on privately?
5. Is Molly a victim, villain, or a hero? Discuss how the film's shifts and turns affect how we see Molly.
6. An anti-hero is defined as "a central character in a story, film, or drama who lacks conventional heroic attributes." These missing attributes include idealism, courage, and morality. Anti-heroes can sometimes do the right thing, but it is usually because it serves their interests to do so. The film presents Molly as an "anti-heroine" who has both feminine and masculine traits, according to conventional definitions. When does she demonstrate her personal code of ethics?
7. Was Molly able to form a close relationship with anyone in the film? Who and why?
8. What is the theme of Molly's Game? Was the film about addiction? Was it a lesson in how the courts operate?
9. Beyond the issue of whether you liked Molly or not, compare the film's direction/style to Equity and Ms Sloane. How are the films similar in techniques, as character-driven films, and/or style?
10. What about the story was revelatory for you personally?
11. What did you think about the ending of the film and her encounter with her father?
12. The film was over 2 hours long and very dense. Who would you recommend the film to? What would you have changed if the film were being made today?

Women Seen and Heard Speaker's Journal

WORKBOOK AND TEMPLATES

Lois Phillips, Ph.D. and Anita Perez Ferguson, Ph.D.

Check out this fun interactive article in the New York Times where Aaron Sorkin annotates the script for Molly's Game: <https://www.nytimes.com/interactive/2017/12/20/arts/sorkin-on-sorkin.html>

CALENDAR & SCHEDULE

The producers of these films are not in any way meant to be presented as endorsing the Women Seen and Heard books. The films are being suggested because they align with the message of our books, specifically women's challenges communicating with decision-makers in male dominated sectors.

May 8, The Contender

Navigating the endorsement process is tough and many believe it's torturous for a woman whose private life will be scrutinized with a magnifying glass. Ugh! Why not escape with a bit of a thriller about the endorsement process? The Contender, starring Jeff Bridges, Joan Allen, and Gary Oldman, holds up very well over time. People who are in their 20s and 30's likely never saw it, so do recommend it! Those over 40 will find it chilling in its relevance to current events. Watch the trailer and see what you think!

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=c9bC0mg_nJY

Click here for the Women Seen and Heard Discussion Guide for this film.

May 15, Equity

Equity is a fictional corporate thriller in the vein of Margin Call. It follows Naomi Bishop, an ambitious and aggressive senior investment banker working on a series of Silicon Valley IPOs in hopes of becoming the head of her division. The Atlantic said it was long overdue as a film exploring the motivations, aspirations, and drawbacks of being female on Wall Street. Watch the trailer and see what you think!

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Xg2TSp5tJy4>

Click here for the Women Seen and Heard Discussion Guide for this film.

May 22, Ms Sloane

Ms Sloane is a 2016 political thriller about Elizabeth Sloane, the most sought after and formidable lobbyist in D.C. The film is set in the high-stakes world of political power-brokers. When asked to help oppose a bill that imposes regulations on firearms, she instead joins a scrappy boutique firm that represents the backers of the law. Her defiant stance and determination to win makes her the target of powerful enemies who threaten her career and the people she cares about. Watch the trailer and see what you think!

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AMUkfmUu44k>

Click here for the Women Seen and Heard Discussion Guide for this film.

May 29, Molly's Game

Molly's Game is an American biographical crime drama film written and directed by Aaron Sorkin (in his directorial debut), based on the memoir of the same name by Molly Bloom. The film follows Bloom (Jessica Chastain), who becomes the target of an FBI investigation regarding the underground poker empire she runs for Hollywood celebrities, athletes, business tycoons, and the Russian mob. Watch the trailer and see what you think!

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Vu4UPet8Nyc>

Click here for the Women Seen and Heard Discussion Guide for this film.

June 5, The Assistant

"The Assistant" is a brand-new film about power dynamics in the workplace. The film takes place over one very long day, when the young heroine comes to sense that something may be "off," not only with her boss, but also with the company he created. She starts her job in a culture that protects/ ignores/denies what is really going on in the office. It is a film that many align with the #METOO movement. Julia Garner's acting (seen recently on the TV series Ozark) is stellar as she tries to understand the nuances and minefields in her new workplace. Watch the trailer and see what you think!

<https://www.amazon.com/Assistant-Julia-Garner/dp/B0844J2MFZ>

Click here for the Women Seen and Heard Discussion Guide for this film.